Prof. Amri Marzali, Ph.D.

Amri Marzali, was born in Silungkang (Sawahlunto, West Sumatera) on December 11, 1942, is a professor of sociocultural anthropology in Department of Anthropology, FISIP, Universitas Indonesia. He earned his bachelor degree in Anthropology in Universitas Indonesia and Gadjah Mada University, during 1962-1973; and M.A. degree from Australian National Universitas, Canberra, in 1983 under the guidance of Prof. James Fox and Prof. Margo Lyon; and PhD degree in Anthropology from Boston University, USA, under the guidance of Prof. Robert W. Hefner and Prof. Allan Hoben.

Aside from teaching in FISIP-UI, he was also a Research Associate in LP3ES, LIPI, and CPIS; an adjunct professor of Postgraduate Program of Rural Sociology, IPB; and the member of Committee of The Development of Forest Concession (Indonesian Forest Entrepreneur Association). Other than that, he was also a fellow professor in International Institute of Asian Studies, Leiden (1998) and Institute of Malayan Nature and Civilization, Universiti Kebangsaan Malaysia (2007-08).

Amri Marzali has done many fieldwork researches in various parts of Indonesia, from Aceh, Papua, to the villages in the interior of Kalimantan; has visited abroad for many academic purposes; and has written more than 100 popular and scientific papers published in newspapers, journals, and books. Some of his published books are Anthropology for Highschool (Jakarta: Indonesian Anthropology Association, 1999); Peisan Cikalong Strategy in Facing Poverty (Jakarta: Yayasan Obor Indonesia, 2003); and Anthropology and Indonesian Development (Jakarta: Prenada Media, 2005).

Some of his newest books are: Social Dimension from Village Development in Indonesia (Jakarta: Yayasan Obor Indonesia) dan The Relationship between Indigenous Ethnic and Non-Indigeneous Ethnic in Indonesia (Jakarta: RajaGrafindo Prenada). He is also still looking for a publisher for his two draft books: The Development of Academic Quality Assurance in Universitas Indonesia and Urbanization in Malaysia and Indonesia. One of his short stories, "Beri Semangat Pada Pasukan Kita," was published in Horison (March, 1993), and later was translated into English: "Support Our Troops", David T. Hill (ed.), in the book Beyond the Horizon. Clayton, Vic. Australia: Monash Asia Institute, 1998.
